Hadzor and Droitwich Spa

Droitwich Spa is situated in the heart of Worcestershire. The town grew from the availability of salt, in fact in Roman times the town was known as Salinae. The brine water found here is so salty only the Dead Sea can equal it in strength and density from a natural source. Hadzor is situated one mile to the east of Droitwich Spa and is bound on the north and eastern sides of the parish by two canals; the Droitwich Junction Canal and Worcester Birmingham Canal. Hadzor is a small picturesque village, which in 1533 Henry VIII gave to Catherine of Aragon as part of their divorce settlement.

DROITWICH SPA DIAMOND JUBILEE WALKS

This is the first in a series of walks around Droitwich Spa to mark the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II.

Droitwich Spa Diamond Jubilee Walks Hadzor Circular

The Hadzor Circular links Droitwich Spa with the small rural village of Hadzor, walking along quiet waterways and through surrounding countryside. The Droitwich Junction and Worcester and Birmingham Canals provide flat and pleasant walking.
